Responsible Lending and Treating Customers Fairly

If a loan application is deemed not to be in the interests of the borrowers, as a responsible lender we reserve the right to decline the application or ask for additional documents to support the application. The Norton Group is committed to treating customers fairly and endeavours to apply the FCA principles for business and four statutory objectives throughout the firm and its culture.

Client Funds

If the loan application is a joint application it is preferable to payout to a joint bank account or by joint cheque, but if it is not possible we will pay out to one party upon receipt of a signed authority and verbal confirmation during the speak-with. We will not payout to anyone other than the property owner.

We will do a security check with all parties to the loan in all cases.

General Principles of Fair Business Practice

When you signed your Standard Terms of Business, you agreed to comply with the guidance issued by the FCA principles of business. Norton and the FCA expect all firms operating within the lending sector to comply with its guidance. Some of the main highlights are shown below:

- Borrowers must be allowed sufficient time to reflect on the terms and conditions of the proposed agreement and must not be subjected to any high-pressure selling. They need to understand the risks associated with taking out a secured loan on their residential property and should be encouraged to take independent advice before signing and allowed adequate opportunity to do so. This will form part of our final security checks.
- There must be transparency in all dealings with all borrowers, with early disclosure of key contract terms and conditions (including rates and charges).
- Contract terms and conditions must be fair and clear, in plain and intelligible language, which can be easily understood by borrowers.
- No irresponsible lending, with all underwriting decisions being subject to a proper assessment of the borrower's ability to repay the loan without undue hardship and without resort to the security, taking full account of all relevant circumstances and any reasonably foreseeable future circumstances.
- Norton will take reasonable steps to ensure that brokers or other intermediaries who regularly act on their behalf do not engage in unfair business practices, act unlawfully or in any way which is deceitful, oppressive, unfair or improper, whether unlawful or not.

Vulnerable Borrowers – Mental Capacity

A 'Vulnerable Borrower' can be described as an individual with limitations in Financial Literacy and those with limitations in Mental Capacity. Brokers must ensure they adhere to the guidance issued by the Money Advice Liaison Group's Debt and Mental Health Good Practise Guidelines.

Brokers must be aware that if at any point in the application for credit process they suspect or gain knowledge that the customer has mental capacity or financial literacy limitations then they must act in accordance with the MALG guidance. Suspicion of mental capacity or financial literacy limitations should have a low threshold as per the guidance, but should be based upon more than a "hunch".

A non-exhaustive list of circumstances which may lead the Broker to suspect customer limitations in mental capacity or financial literacy follows:

- Where disclosure is given by the applicant
- Where disclosure is given by someone likely to have an informed view, such as a partner or carer etc
- Where a Power of Attorney is known to exist
- Where medical evidence exists or a previous diagnosis
- Where the applicant acts out of character or in an unexpected manner
- Where the applicant cannot retain information concerning their application or appears confused about personal or financial information
- Where the applicant does not understand what they are applying for or information given to them
- Where the applicant appears unable to weigh up information, or communicate their borrowing decision by reasonable means

Where there is suspicion that an applicant has a mental capacity or financial literacy limitation, the applicant shouldn't be regarded as being unable to make a decision unless steps have been taken to assist first without success.

Brokers should provide assistance to these applicants in clear language to help them make decisions; rather than immediately declining their application.

The following measures can be taken to help an applicant's understanding:

- Providing additional information on the "key risks" of the agreement, which can include features of the agreement, how much they will pay, the consequences of not maintaining payment, advisability of considering pre-contract information and their ability to request further information if required
- Carrying out a detailed assessment of the applicants financial circumstances to ensure their ability to afford to meet repayments in a suitable manner
- Ensuring that applicants do not take unsuitable credit, even where this is affordable. An example would be an applicant settling unsecured credit with a secured loan, without any obvious benefit
- Giving applicants adequate time to weigh up the information and explanations provided in order to better enable them to reach responsible borrowing decisions
- Referring the applicant to suitable not-for-profit third parties for additional advice, such as Citizens Advice Bureau Where there is suspicion or knowledge of mental capacity or financial literacy limitations, all applications must be referred and marked for the attention of the Norton lending Manager or in their absence the Group Compliance manager for consideration.

You should note what additional steps you have taken to assist customer understanding. Norton may require independent legal advice to be carried out to ensure that the customer has full understanding.

Guidance includes a recommendation for a written invitation to the applicant to disclose any additional relevant information. Norton has amended its Terms of Business Letter and brokers are asked to do the same.

Brokers should also note that any information gathered in relation to mental capacity or financial literacy limitations are classed as sensitive data under the Data Protection Act and should be treated accordingly.
